

Nurses in Canadian primary health care settings - a review of recent literature

Faculty of Nursing, University of Toronto - Barriers and facilitators to the implementation of the advanced nurse practitioner role in primary care settings: A scoping review

Description: -

- Nursing -- Canada
Nurses -- Canada
Nurses in Canadian primary health care settings - a review of recent literature

- Ornithological monographs -- no. 5
Literature review monograph (University of Toronto. Faculty of Nursing) -- 2
Literature review monograph -- 2
Nurses in Canadian primary health care settings - a review of recent literature

Notes: Bibliography: p. 17-26.

This edition was published in 1980

Filesize: 57.97 MB

Tags: #Clinical #supervision #in #primary #health #care; #experiences #of #district #nurses #as #clinical #supervisors

Department of Health

In 2006, for example, First Nations and Inuit households were three and four times as likely to live in a dwelling in need of major repairs, respectively.

Navigation delivery models and roles of navigators in primary care: a scoping literature review

Following the Kelowna Accord, hopes were high within the Aboriginal community and policy and decision makers as the Government of Canada had pledged to continue to work inclusively in the development of a policy framework to implement the targets of the Kelowna Accord. There thus seems to be a gap between theoretical education and practical training even in the context of PHC as a clinical learning environment. To enhance transferability, the participants, context and process of analysis have been described with great care.

Barriers and facilitators to the implementation of the advanced nurse practitioner role in primary care settings: A scoping review

Considering the application of outcomes in the Canadian context, reviews that exclusively included studies conducted in either underdeveloped or developing countries were excluded.

Creating conditions for Canadian aboriginal health equity: the promise of healthy public policy

The three settings studied were examples of relatively successful integration, but all relied on very different implementation structures and practices. The system has since been modified in 2015, resulting in further centralization and administrative integration of institutions into what are now called CISSS: Centres intégrés de santé et de services sociaux, and CIUSSS: Centres intégrés universitaires de santé et de services sociaux.

Behavior change interventions and policies influencing primary healthcare professionals' practice—an overview of reviews

Definition of the research questions The specific research questions of the scoping review were as follows. Interviews were audio-recorded, transcribed, and read for accuracy.

Health advice and education given to overweight patients by primary care doctors and nurses: A scoping literature review

UK surveys reveal that there are important gaps in the nutritional knowledge of both doctors and nurses. Without national healthy public policy on Aboriginal health, there will be no accountability in addressing the issue of youth suicide, Murdered and Missing Indigenous Women and Girls, and other highly inequitable Aboriginal-specific situations.

Department of Health

In addition, they should supervise students without prior discussions or agreement on whether or not certain DNs were willing or had the educational competence to supervise students.

Related Books

- Working together for young children - multi-professionalism in action
- Lord Grey of the Reform bill - being the life of Charles, second earl of Grey
- Embassies of other days and further recollections
- Chronicles of the South Carolina sea islands
- Water supply