Why a North Korean Defector Says the Regime Will Soon End

In 1832, Chief Black Hawk led around 1,000 Sauk and Fox Indians back to Illinois to reclaim their land. To underline the magnitude of this sacrifice, that number is nearly 1,400 more than have been killed in Iraq and Afghanistan in the last 12 years.

The nation is angry, but it is not broken. Between 1883 and 1941, 4,467 people, about three-quarters of whom were Black, were in the United States.

American

By the early 20 century, the American-Indian Wars had effectively ended, but at great cost. And it is a memorial that lacks a record of the names of the 36,574 Americans who died in Korea. Its primacy and global interests prompt others both to seek its assistance in addressing their problems and to resent it for meddling in their affairs.
