Such policies are designed to protect the safety and wellbeing of children in the early years setting by providing a safe and healthy environment for children. Three of the most important changes are: the creation of children's trusts under the duty to co-operate, the setting up of Local Safeguarding Children Boards LSCBs, and the duty on all agencies to make arrangements to safeguard and promote the welfare of children.

During the passage of the 2014 Act, Scottish Ministers also announced a longer-term ambition to allow those care leavers who may need it the opportunity to return to care, up to the age of 21. The PaCT team will continue to develop this support to local authorities to ensure that no child is lost in the system.

Getting it right for looked after children and young people strategy

Policies and practice help to make sure the safety and wellbeing of children is in place and it is this legislation, developed through many years and experiences, and even mistakes, that underpin the working practices that are used today Shonkoff, 2010.

Getting it right for looked after children and young people strategy

We know that children who have experienced neglect and abuse are significantly more likely to develop insecure and disorganised attachments and that this can have an impact throughout their lives, with a heightened risk of emotional and behavioural problems and impacts on learning and health. Children's Services: Working Together brings together contributions from a number of authors in the field.
