Exocet missile: how the sinking of HMS Sheffield made it famous

HMS Glamorgan was in the thick of the fighting throughout the war. There was little wind and half a moon that night as Glamorgan, in response to calls from ashore, rained 145 shells, nearly four tons of high explosive, on enemy positions. Close-in anti-aircraft protection was provided by a pair of launchers and two single Oerlikon 20mm cannons, with two twin gun mounts were fitted forward.
