The Search for Meaningful Purpose: Reminiscences of an Indian Engineer

There is one incident that I can recall with regard to my election which was told me afterwards. Then the boat was very quietly rowed through the struggling mass of fish, until the net was full, and it was hauled on board, and the glittering silver like sardines were thrown into the bottom of the boat.

After leaving General Van Dorn's headquarters I proceeded, in company with one of Colonel Withers' officers, up the bank of the river to reconnoiter.

Stewart, Homer Joe (Aeronautical Engineer)

EXETER 53 pleasure in conveying to you the hearty thanks of this Society for your energy in practically carrying out the suggestions, not only in clearing the snow from the streets, but also in preventing the accumulation of ice in the river which might have produced a most disastrous flood. I approached the dockyard authorities but was received with some coldness. We went to our guns, and in a minute were ready for battle.

Reminiscences of an Ancient Strategist (July 1997 edition)

What of the hours we have lost. But we were young..... We had two long spells in the Northern Pacific with short breaks in The Philippines and a rest and rehabilitation trip to Brisbane, Australia.
