In the ultra-Orthodox sector, the average support per student is even less than in the other two sectors. The comptroller's examination found, however, that the ministry has no ordered and updated database of the needs of the education system, or figures concerning the number of teachers who are expected to teach in the coming years in the various districts.

Within the Board of Education itself, work on salary questions was initially dealt with by the appropriate school branch, but in order to secure greater uniformity between scales in different types of school, a Salaries Branch was set up in 1925 to coordinate the work. Detailed instructions on how this will be carried out will be issued. All gymnasiums and lyceums, will start with distance education on Friday January 8, and further information regarding their opening will be forthcoming later on.

Teacher training

Figures compiled by the CBS indicate a more optimistic picture than in 1991 - 72 percent of TTC graduates in the state sector and 66 percent of graduates in the state religious sector find teaching jobs, with 61 percent of the state school teachers and 52 percent in the state religious system working as teachers for at least five years. Christopher Rufo has been leading the fight against Critical Race Theory in education. In 2003 the TTCs' budget from the Education Ministry totaled NIS 806 million.

This reduction was applied for three years and extended a further year at five per cent before the cuts were finally removed. According to the documents and to sources within the district, the Office of Education held a series of teacher-training sessions on how to deploy ethnic studies in the classroom.
