Chunju Han

Anne Fishbein Click to enlarge Dishing it out at Chunju Han-il Kwan Anne Fishbein Click to enlarge Spitting image: A bubbling cauldron of budae jjigae The repertoire of Korean cooking includes many, many refined jjigae, thick, chile-dosed soups made with kimchi, homemade tofu or sparkling-fresh fish, shellfish or octopus, choice bits of pork or cattle innards. While trying to come up with blogposts about my last trip, I came across photos of jajangmyeon stir fried noodles in black bean sauce , pork belly , and pig's feet which ignited a frenzied search for those dishes in Cebu .

Mustachioventures: Lunch Promos at Han Guk Kwan Korean Restaurant

The herb-laced beef soup with delicate mandu dumplings is first-rate, and the noodles for the guksu are handmade.

Han Kook Kwan Korean Restaurant, BBQ & Grill, Manama ravintola

The restaurant is well known in Koreatown for its enormous array of panchan, small, cool, free appetizers that appear here in battalions of 10 tiny dishes: the usual cabbage kimchi, chile-soaked cucumbers, cold broccoli, sesame-scented bean sprouts and cubed turnips, but also pickled ferns, small omelets, shreds of candied cuttlefish and simmered chunks of fish, as well as a serving of the cellophane-noodle dish chap chae as big as some restaurants serve as a main course. A spitting cauldron of superheated liquid on a tabletop burner, ejecting droplets of orange goo and puffs of sulfurous steam, the budae jjigae at the Koreatown restaurant Chunju Han-il Kwan is alarming in aspect.

Chunju Han

Going through the labyrinth that is the internet, I somehow found my way to which wasn't updated at all. The twangs and pentatonic yowls of Korean classical music play at almost subliminally low volume.

Han Kook Kwan Korean Restaurant, BBQ & Grill, Manama ravintola

Chunju Han-il Kwan is an oddly traditional restaurant, paneled with darkened wood and decorated with old cooking implements and veneered cross sections of logs. That familiar-looking square of curly noodles? Their lunch promo is only for jajangmyeon and bossam.
