In my review of complaints systems in other jurisdictions, it became clear that no one system stands out as a model upon which all others should be based. In the end, those people I met greatly informed my understanding of police oversight and shaped my recommendations to improve it. In January 1952, the Board began hearings on rate equalization.

West (Louis Jolyon) papers

The latter is equally important because Government should not be in the embarrassing position of having the bona fides of their senior officers questioned. This is increasingly so within a pluralistic and diverse society.
