Amberley airfield, south of Ipswich, had been constructed prior to the war.

Australia's racist past and present

After years of neglect, the Empire Theatre was extensively renovated in the late 1990s, but retains much of its art deco architecture and decorations, especially the arch. The program aimed to use visual arts to help people of retirement age transition to their post-employment life and continue to be an active member of society. A Benevolent Institution at Dunwich, North Stradbroke Island established 1866, closed 1945, operated with minimal services and at times could not meet demand for admission.

Racism Then And Now

These were achieved through offering a variety of engaging talks, tours, workshops, films and excursions! In April 1954, a contract to construct four cottages two each on either side of the existing cottage and one earth closet was signed by contractor L Davey and the work was likely undertaken in late 1954. Historical records provide rough estimates of the extent and intensity of droughts in parts of Australia since the late 1700s.

Queensland Registry of Births, Deaths and Marriages

As a result of the festival, over 50 pieces of large-scale, public art exist throughout the Toowoomba CBD, which has led to a transformation of previously underutilised lane and alleyways, as well as a reduction in costs associated with graffiti management.
