Ephraim the Syrian Homily, XXII. His eyelids were injured by having been smoked.

The of Saint Makarios of Egypt (Fr. George Florovsky)

The fervour and directness of the appeal in most of them does not suggest composition in the cell, with no concrete hearers in view. One had a beard, the other the beginnings of a beard.

Pseudo

But when you hear of these things happening, let not your mind travel far away; but since these things were a figure and shadow of the realities, apply them to yourself.
