The Sound of Gunfire: A decent debut from Tavish

He was clearly horrified by the bureaucratic morass that forced them from their own home into a council house - for which the council refused to them build a ramp. His big moment to come clean, regain a bit of credibility and join the rest of the human race on planet reality by accepting what even the birds in the trees know: that Labour spent too much and borrowed too much.

Kirsty Williams

John Stuart Mill was an early Liberal nationalist if, and only if, that is what you want to find in his writing. In the BSE saga we see all the failures of this Government and of modern Conservatism: It begins with an obsession with low-cost, profit-driven deregulation.

Nicola Sturgeon branded 'reckless and irresponsible' over SNP independence pledge

We are dealing with the deficit. Yet, this was wishful thinking as the campaign was inevitably dragged down by internal tensions and divisions. A claim for oil built on such misconceptions will not stand up to any kind of scrutiny.

Better Together and the No Campaign: from Project Fear to Grace?

It is good that pensioners, however many there are, will get a rise at the official rate of inflation. The two are not linked. It was felt that identifying potential sympathisers or undecided voters and using traditional campaigning methods such as canvassing, leafleting and organising meetings would be much more efficient on a local basis.
