The fire, starting on the second floor, advanced with breath-taking swiftness among the highly flammable decorations. Hell's Half Acre was the primary hangout for Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, just for on Very good early history of Fort Worth Cowtown, and how it turned from a rip-roaring, shoot 'em up outpost to a very civilized, cultured, still small-town-feel city, with big ties and lots of First Records in varied categories in a very short 100 years! The rallying caught up with the grading at Sycamore Creek; so, instead of a trestle, cribs of ties were used to support the track over the creek and then the rails were laid on the ground for two miles. I'm proud of my city.
