Monographs on Medicinal Plants of Bhutan

Pema Dorji, the director of Bhutan's Institute, was originally trained at the Mentsekhang in Lhasa, prior to the Chinese take over. The aromatic fruits, commonly referred to as anise seeds, are used for the herbal actions and culinary properties of this plant. The other ingredient is the root bark from Cinnamomum tamala Bhutanese name: shing-tsha, which adds flavor, aids digestion, and stabilizes bowel movements.
