When parents and teachers work together

She understands that it can be difficult and controversial even to expect overburdened teachers to do more, but with the right kind of support from schools, teachers could gain a far more holistic understanding of the lives of students and parents through a simple house visit. As a side note, if you're sick, call in sick and take the day off.

NASUWT

The NASUWT has produced guidance which will have a positive impact on reducing excessive workload and working hours, including specific instructions that deal with the number of meetings teachers attend. At these times, the teachers answer any questions raised by the parent using the chat function. This lack of adequate school resources also adds to the amount of work teachers are expected to do and the lack of support they are given to do it.
