Longinus on the Sublime by William Rhys Roberts

Way an idea which Euripides has echoed, in other words, it is true, and with some abatement of its crudity, where he says:— The whole mount shared their bacchic ecstasy. Demosthenes compared with Hyperides, Lysias with Plato.

On the Sublime

Of those factors of sublimity which we specified at the beginning the fifth one still remains, good friend—this was the arrangement of the words themselves in a certain order. Way In mutual fealty they devoted themselves by that joint oath to a relentless doom.

Longinus

If I speak of old age, it is nevertheless the old age of Homer. The fifth cause of elevation—one which is the fitting conclusion of all that have preceded it—is dignified and elevated composition.
