services: how are we doing and what more needs to be done?.

The traditional healer in obstetric care: A persistent wasted opportunity in maternal health

In coming decades, these long-term change processes will exact an increasing health toll via physical hazards, infectious diseases, food and water shortages, conflict and an inter-linked decline in societal capacity. This odd requirement has contributed to further stigma, thus defeating the purpose of the legislation. Further, economic globalization, with increasingly powerful transnational companies shaping global consumer behaviours, has tended to make unhealthy choices the easier choices, including cigarettes, fast-food diets, high-sugar drinks, automated no-effort domestic technologies and others.
